Milbank Denies that He Was His Adversary.

He Would Fight Him.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE EVENING WORLD.] Lordon, April 30 .- in spite of the denials there is still a belief here that the Duke de Morny may have been Milbank's adversary in the Beigian duel. The fact that De Moray is reported to be alive in Parts and unwounded is not accepted as positive evidence that he did not right. It is possible that this duel may have been as bloodless as that of Fox and Borrowe, and the principals to avoid ridicule my have decided to keep De Morny's name out of it and cooked up the story of an un-known Frenchman being wounded in the hip. The fact that there was a duel, and that one of the principals was taken away in a yacht is admitted by Milbank to be true. He denics, however, that his adversary was De Morny. DE MORNY WAS IN BRUSSELS.
